Foreword

Graduates left with a feeling of accomplishment, mixed with awe and anxiety about going into the competitive world, but there is a good basis for their beginning.

Juniors were beginning to experiment with the individuality they had been hearing about. Sophomores envied seniors and freshmen simultaneously as they were eager to be independent, yet hesitant about leaving "conformity!" Freshmen were still amazed at seeing a new freedom opening up to them.

As a member of a class, each student has had an opportunity to grow with the school . . . grow in a-bility to think and know, choose and plan as does no other living form.

Perhaps the most valuable result of all education is the ability to make yourself do the thing you have to do, when it ought to be done, whether you like it or not; it is the first lesson that ought to be learned; and however early a man's training begins, it is probably the last lesson that he learns thoroughly.
